WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA AND CENTRAL COASTAL AREAS:

Eureka Weather:

A series of storm systems will bring periods of rain through the weekend. A ridge of high pressure will develop on Monday resulting in a return to dry conditions and warmer than normal temperatures through the work week.

Medford Weather:

A southwest flow will continue moving through the area and will stall and weaken over northern California Friday afternoon. Snow levels will be 6000 to 7000 feet tonight lowering to 5000 to 6000 feet Friday. Saturday will be generally showery and unsettled with no discernable fronts. Snow levels will rise to around 8000 feet.

Reno Weather:

A series of weak disturbances will bring moist onshore flow into far northern California this weekend. This will bring the potential for light rain and higher elevation snow, generally north and west of Susanville. Temperatures will rise above average through the weekend.

San Francisco Weather:

High pressure over California will weaken slightly today as a frontal system pushes inland from the Pacific Northwest. Rain chances are possible mainly across the North Bay through the weekend. Dry and mild weather will continue for areas south of the Golden Gate. High pressure will rebuild by Monday and result in dry weather well into next week.

WEATHER

CENTRAL CALIFORNIA AND SOUTHERN SAN JOAQUIN VALLEY

Sacramento Weather:

A couple weak weather systems brush by Northern California today into Sunday bringing some clouds and a threat of precipitation mainly north of the Interstate 80 corridor. Dry weather expected Monday through Thursday as a ridge of high pressure builds along the West Coast.

Hanford Weather:

High pressure will remain over Central California for the next several days. The pattern will remain dry.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA:

Los Angeles Weather:

High pressure and offshore flow will continue the above normal temperatures through at least the weekend. A couple of weak upper disturbances will develop Tuesday and Thursday for a cooling trend to near normal temperatures. Another ridge of high pressure is expected to return late next week into the weekend with a warming trend.

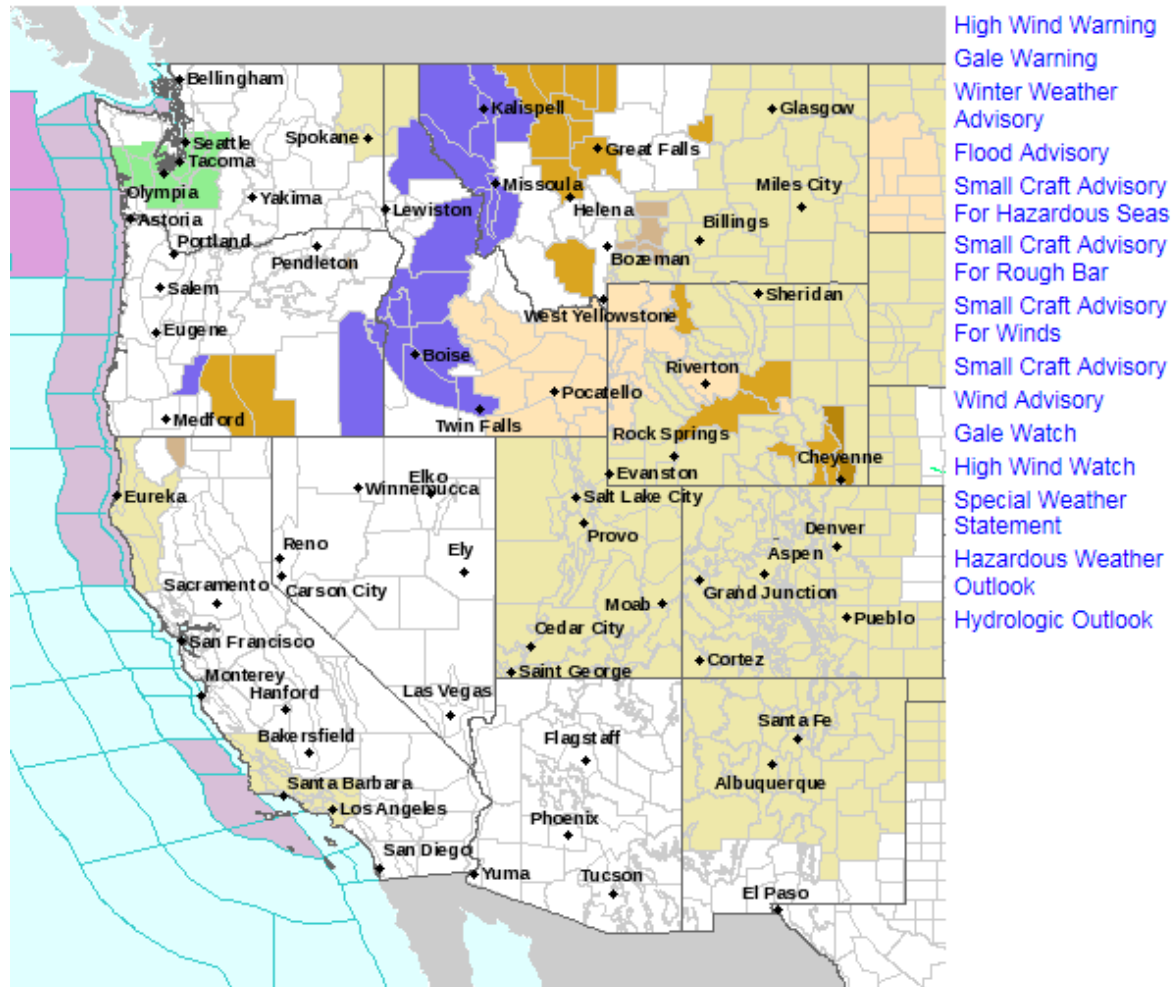

Extreme Southwestern California Including Orange, San Diego, Western Riverside and Southwestern San Bernardino Counties:

Dry and warm weather will prevail through the upcoming weekend. A shallow marine layer could bring areas of dense fog near the coast Sunday morning and again Monday morning. A trough of low pressure over the western United States will bring a cooling trend Tuesday and Wednesday next week followed by a renewed offshore flow pattern bringing gusty winds and warmer weather once again.

Southeast California Weather:

High pressure that has now established itself will continue to bring dry conditions and above normal temperatures through the middle part of next week. A cooling trend and an increase in cloudiness is likely by the end of next week as low pressure begins to drop southward over the western US.
